

Australian
National University

Special donor update

April 2020

The Vice-Chancellor's message to the ANU community »

This is a challenging time for all of us, as everybody is impacted by the pandemic, regardless of where we are in the world. I know, by supporting each other, we can emerge from this challenge as a stronger community.

Providing certainty to students

At ANU, we are one community. For years, generous donors like you have provided certainty to many students through your support. Thank you.

Many of you have been contacting us to find out how you can support our students in this ever-evolving situation. We're grateful to see our community rally together in times such as these. The University has announced a \$1 million emergency financial assistance fund to support students. However, we know that will not be enough, as more and more students experience the impact of COVID-19.

We are currently working on ways our donor community can support students to continue learning, and will be in touch soon to provide more details on how you can help. As a donor, you help shape the future of our community. We value your interest in giving some certainty to our students through this uncertain time.